Man charged with sexual exploitation of children

A 34-year-old Ottawa man has been charged with several sexual offences against children and possession to publish child pornography in two separate incidents, one dating back to 1998.

Patrick Gilles Lavergne is set to appear in court Wednesday to face two counts of sexual exploitation of a young person, two counts of sexual interference with a person under 16 and one count of printing, publishing or possessing child pornography.

The offences involved two children aged five and nine and took place in September of 1998 and in October of this year. Investigators believe there could be more victims.

Former nurse saves co-worker from choking

A former nurse turned civil servant saved a co-worker's life Tuesday by performing the Heimlich manoeuvre while her colleague was choking on her lunch.

Paramedics were called to a federal building on Tuesday after reports that a woman in her 50s was choking on her food. The former nurse saw that the woman couldn't speak and was turning blue from a lack of oxygen. She immediately performed the Heimlich manoeuvre and the food was dislodged within seconds.

Officer conduct. No demotion for sergeant who cut woman's shirt and bra off with scissors

trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

An Ottawa police officer who was found guilty of discreditable conduct following his treatment of a female prisoner in the cellblock will be docked 20 days' pay, a hearing officer ruled Tuesday.

Retired OPP Supt. Robert Fitches found Sgt. Steven Desjourdy guilty of the charge under the Police Services Act in April after reviewing evidence from the Sept. 6, 2008, incident.

The widely publicized incident made headlines after it was revealed Desjourdy cut off the shirt and bra of a female prisoner and left her half-naked in the cell with her pants soaked in her own urine for more than three hours.

Desjourdy's lawyer, Michael Edelson, argued at the hearing that his client thought the female prisoner was suicidal and that any supplied clothing might be used to harm herself. But Fitches rejected that suggestion, noting the officer's assertion was nothing but an "afterthought."

In the end, it was Desjourdy's conduct before and after the cellblock incident that saved him from risking his current rank of sergeant. Fitches described glowing reviews of Desjourdy from sworn and civilian members inside and outside the police force as well as individual members of the community, who wrote nearly 100 letters of commendation.

"It is troubling in the extreme that an officer with the extraordinarily positive attributes that are described in his background materials leads a blemish-free, stellar policing career since 1994, and then for no apparent reason ... seems to veer so far off his normal trajectory that it is remarkable," said Fitches.

While he said the sergeant's behaviour that day was serious, he also found there was a lack of cellblock policy in 2008 with which to hold Desjourdy against. Since then, several changes have been made to how officers conduct themselves in the cellblock.

Prosecutor Rob Houston asked for a six-month demotion to constable, while Edelson requested a sentence of five days of docked pay.

A demotion would have been "overly harsh," Fitches ruled.

Ottawa Police Association president Matt Skof said he was "quite pleased" with the ruling, and to see closure in the case.

He said 20 days' pay would amount to approximately $8,000 for an officer in Desjourdy's position.

Defence minister pays tribute to slain soldier

'Senseless act.'
Canadian personnel are joining an international combat mission against the extremist group ISIS

Six Canadian fighter jets left to join an international combat mission against Islamic State extremists in Iraq on Tuesday as the defence minister paid tribute to a soldier killed at home.

Rob Nicholson called the death of Warrant Officer Patrice Vincent in Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu, Que., a "senseless act" that will only strengthen the military's determination.

"As we deploy our CF-18s and Hercules aircraft, all Canadians should be proud of our men and women in uniform who are dedicated to providing safety and security whenever they are called upon," Nicholson said after the jets deployed from the Cold Lake military base in northern Alberta.

"Our Canadian armed forces members represent the best of Canada, and to have one die in such a senseless act only strengthens our resolve."

Police in Quebec say a car was driven deliberately into Vincent and a fellow soldier on Monday. The driver was shot and killed by police after a short chase. The second soldier is expected to survive.

Local restaurateur claims to be victim of latest scam

A Manotick restaurateur says he was swindled into buying $700 worth of prepaid credit cards after being threatened to have his business's electricity cut off from someone purporting to be a Hydro Ottawa technician.

It's a telephone fraud scheme that has been making the rounds recently in Ottawa, targeting local business owners.

Narong Hajibaka, owner of the Thai restaurant Khao Yum on Main Street, says he received one of these calls on Thanksgiving weekend when the caller said he needed to make a deposit for an upgraded hydro meter.

If Hajibaka didn't pay up within 45 minutes, his restaurant's power would be cut, he was told.

He thought it was the real deal and didn't want to put his business in jeopardy, so he gave the caller his credit card number.

But, the caller said he couldn't process it, so he instructed Hajibaka to purchase a prepaid credit card in the amount of $700 and give him the number located on the back of the card, which he did.

Narong Hajibaka says he was fooled by a man claiming to be a Hydro Ottawa technician who threatened to cut off his restaurant's power if he didn't make an upfront payment. JOE LOFARO/METRO

It was only until Visa called him later that day to verify unusual activity on his card that he realized something was awry.

"I feel so stupid," said Hajibaka Tuesday. "I don't believe what happened to me. I believed him so easy."

He said he can't get his money back and doesn't know if the caller can even make a purchase with the card numbers, but now he is warning others about what happened so they aren't fooled, too.

Since Oct. 9, Hydro Ottawa says there have been five reported incidents in which suspicious callers threaten to disconnect customers' power if they don't make immediate payments.

CTV Ottawa reported Monday evening the owner of Elgin Street Diner also received one of these phone calls.

"Hydro Ottawa's collections process includes several mail notices and a hand delivered notice prior to electricity disconnection," said Hydro Ottawa spokesperson Daniel Séguin in an email statement to Metro.

"There have been reports of similar suspicious calls targeting utility customers elsewhere, including the Toronto area and Thunder Bay."

Hydro Ottawa recommends anyone who receives suspicious phone calls such as these to call the Ottawa Police Fraud Section at 613-236-122 extension 5433 right away. JOE LOFARO/METRO

Officer dismissed after investigation

Gatineau police are not identifying a senior officer who was dismissed Tuesday after he was the subject of a criminal investigation in Trois-Rivières, Que., but recently cleared of any formal charges.

Since no charges were laid, Gatineau police Chief Mario Harel said the "high level" officer could not be named and details of the allegations are to remain sealed.

Police also probed the officer internally and determined he breached police protocol on the use of technology, the use of police service vehicles, and the use of police information systems. He had been suspended from the force since Feb. 28 when officials made their investigation public.

City council voted Tuesday to dismiss him from the force.

The Police Act states that a member of the force can only be dismissed if a resolution passes by a majority of the members on city council.

"The investigation of disciplinary process disclosed serious violations of municipal directives as well as of the Gatineau police and of the internal disciplinary rules applicable to police officers," said Harel at a press conference at Gatineau City Hall Tuesday.

"In view of the misconduct, the amount of trust with this police officer has been irreparably broken. We deem that relieving him of his duties was the appropriate disciplinary sanction."

The officer has the option to appeal the decision. JOE LOFARO/METRO

Shopping spree. Ashley McFarland suffers life-threatening form of Spina Bifida

LUCY SCHOLEY
lucy.scholey@metronews.ca

An Ottawa teenager with a life-threatening form of Spina Bifida scored the ultimate shopping spree through Make-A-Wish Canada on Tuesday.

Because of her condition, Ashley McFarland had never been in a mall before. So the 16-year-old burst into tears and smiles when she entered Bayshore Shopping Centre to the cheers of dozens of family members and friends.

She rolled her wheelchair down a red carpet and hugged loved ones who were holding up signs and handing her flowers. Her shopping trip of 14 stores included H&M, Garage and Build-A-Bear. She cruised past storeowners holding up more signs, a DJ and stopped for a cupcake decorated with a photo of herself.

Make-A-Wish Canada granted the teen her wish to shop with all her loved ones.

"I love shopping and I figured it was the only thing I could do," said McFarland. "It was the only thing that my family and all my good friends could come and join me (on)."

McFarland arrived in style: A white limousine and wearing hot pink nails, freshly cut and curled hair and new make-up courtesy of Rinaldo's. It was her first professional 'do and makeup.

Like any teen, McFarland is into clothes, books and music. She's a big fan of One Direction.

But unlike most kids her age, McFarland makes frequent visits to the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario (CHEO).

She just got out of a four-month stay at CHEO and is moving into a new home in Greely under the care of nurses.

"We're just getting her ready for new clothes and new bedding and such for her new place, so it'll be great," said Annie Stiles, the wish co-ordinator at Make-A-Wish Eastern Ontario. "This is a life-changing experience for her."

The 34-year-old organization grants wishes to kids with life-threatening conditions.

Boy fighting cancer stocks up with dream toy-shopping spree

A 10-year-old Ottawa boy battling cancer had the shopping spree of a lifetime on Tuesday at Toys "R" Us.

Liam Elder, who has leukemia and has been in CHEO for the past three months, came straight from the hospital for his early morning three-minute dash through the store.

It was the first such event in the country this year and was organized by the Starlight Children's Foundation Canada — an organization that provides family and children's programs and services from hospital to home.

The dashes were organized this year after Toys "R" Us donated gift certificates worth several thousand dollars to auction off for Starlight.

"Somebody bought it — and after they bought it at the gala, they donated it back to Starlight to a bunch of worthy children," said Brian Bringolf, Starlight's executive director. "It's a pretty cool, different type of thing to give back to a Starlight child. It's a special, once-in-a-lifetime, unbelievable occasion."

Liam's father, Peter, did a "recon mission" the day before to check out where the important toys were located in the St. Laurent Shopping Centre Toys "R" Us location. The most important to Liam were the Lego packs.

Peter said Liam has been checking out the toys online for a while, picking out his top choices.

The entire Glebe-based Elder family attended, including Liam's brother Ben, who took home a few toys of his own such as a Nerf gun.

"It was really nice to see him moving around and doing things," Peter said. "He's been in the hospital for almost three months straight, so a day where he can do this and focus on something different is great."

The shopping spree was capped at a $2,000 limit, but Liam took home several carts full of toys, including a healthy portion of Lego.

Peter said some of the toys will go to CHEO, and the family will save others to keep Liam busy in a month when he travels to SickKids Hospital in Toronto for a bone-marrow transplant.

Grant fuels brothers' research into divergent cancer treatments

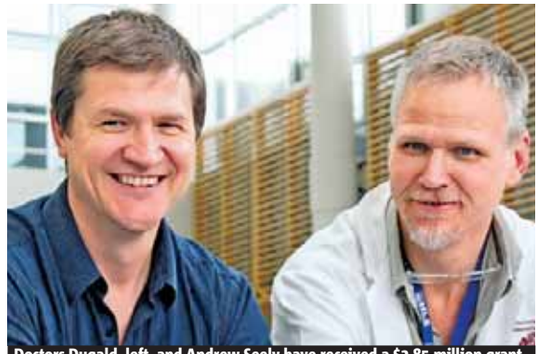
Two brothers from different medical worlds have received a $3.85-million grant to lead research teams fighting cancer through a combination of naturopathic therapies and mainstream medicine.

Dr. Dugald Seely is a naturopath and executive director of the Ottawa Integrative Cancer Centre (OICC), while his older brother Dr. Andrew Seely is a thoracic surgeon and scientist at the Ottawa Hospital Research Institute (OHRI).

"Surgical therapy is fundamentally different from the kind of therapy my brother administers," explained Andrew, "but we are bound by the same principles of seeking to improve care or finding ways to prove or disprove, with vigorous research, whether things work or don't work. We can find that common ground and work together."

The grant is the largest of its kind in North America and courtesy of a private Canadian foundation that's asking to stay anonymous.

The massive 11-year, 300-patient study will take both an academic and clinical approach to this combination of naturopathic and conventional therapies. Both the OHRI and the OICC — which is a branch of the Canadian College of Naturopathic Medicine — are involved in the study of integrative care that includes pre- and post-cancer surgery treatments.



Doctors Dugald, left, and Andrew Seely have received a $3.85-million grant to co-lead a study on the link between naturopathic and mainstream cancer treatments. TREVOR GREENWAY/METRO

While each doctor may have his own biases when it comes to cancer care, the goal is ultimately to compile data and present findings on the types of therapies available.

"From the standpoint of any physician, conventional or naturopathic, they want what's best for the patient," said Dugald. "The belief is that this is going to contribute value to that patient's care."

Medicine runs in the Seely family. The brothers' parents are both physicians, one sister is a radiologist and the other is a veterinarian.

"It's a privilege and totally fun to do research with one's brother on something you feel passionate about," said Andrew.

Attack linked to terror: Minister

Quebec. Police say act was deliberate and that one of the two soldiers was in uniform

Police say a car was driven deliberately into two soldiers, killing one of them in what Public Safety Minister Steven Blaney called an act of violence against Canada that was "clearly linked" to terrorist ideology.

Blaney said Tuesday that Canada is taking terrorist threats seriously, adding he was "horrified and saddened" by Monday's incident in Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu, Que.

'Vicious event,' says PM

"This was a despicable act of violence that strikes against ... our very values as a civilized democracy."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper

"What took place yesterday is clearly linked to terrorist ideology," he told a news conference in the town southeast of Montreal.

The soldier who was killed has been identified as Patrice Vincent, a 53-year-old warrant officer. In the Commons Prime Minister Stephen Harper praised Vincent as a 28-year veteran who served with distinction across the country.

Provincial police said the second soldier's injuries are less serious and his life was not in danger. THE CANADIAN PRESS

CSIS to be given more powers

As investigators piece together the attack on two Canadian soldiers in Quebec, a parallel political dimension is playing out. The Conservative government is poised to introduce legislation that would give Canada's spy service more powers, saying the Quebec assault underscores the growing danger of homegrown radicalism.

RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson confirmed the man was one of 90 suspected extremists the RCMP believed were intending to join fights abroad or who have returned to Canada.

"The individual who struck the two CAF members with his car is known to federal authorities, including the Integrated National Security Enforcement Team," said Jason MacDonald, communications director for Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Winnipeg police uncover remains of up to four dead infants in storage locker

Police investigating. Autopsies must be conducted before deaths can be deemed homicides: Officer

Company security staff walk past storage lockers in Winnipeg on Tuesday. JOHN WOODS/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Police say the discovery of as many as four dead infants in a storage locker is tragic, but it was not yet clear Tuesday if the deaths were homicides.

Const. Eric Hofley said concerned employees at the storage locker company in northwest Winnipeg called police Monday afternoon. Once inside, he said, officers found what appeared to be the remains of the babies.

It's not clear how the infants died, how old they were or even if they were full term, Hofley told a news conference. But the victims appeared to be "very, very young" and could be newborns.

Autopsies were being conducted. The discovery is being investigated by the child abuse unit and the homicide detectives are being kept apprised of the investigation, Hofley said.

Police were talking to a few people, but the remains don't appear to be linked to any infants that have been reported missing, he added.

"It's suspicious. Until autopsies have been completed, whether it is found that someone has deliberately caused the death of one or all of these infants, that remains to be seen. It's just too early in the investigation to say exactly what's transpired here."

Razmin Mansoub, president of U-Haul Company of Central Canada, said the remains were found by employees.

"U-Haul team members made a disturbing discovery when taking inventory of a delinquent storage locker on Monday," Mansoub said in an emailed statement. "They immediately contacted law enforcement, who believed the locker contained human remains."

Police are remaining tight-lipped for now because they don't want to do anything to jeopardize an investigation in its early stages, Hofley said.

Even if the deaths were not a result of foul play, charges could still be laid, Hofley said.

"Obviously, you're not allowed to store, to conceal human remains. That, in itself, would be a charge. Until such time that the autopsies have determined what exactly was the cause of this, we won't know what the full extent of the charges may or may not be."

An update on the investigation was expected Wednesday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Muzzled scientists

Foreign scientists sign open letter decrying Harper

More than 800 scientists from around the world have signed an open letter to Prime Minister Stephen Harper decrying what they call a rapid decline in funding and freedoms faced by Canadian government scientists.

"Earth to Canada: Science Needs You," says the headline over the letter that was published as an ad in the Ottawa Citizen newspaper. They say complex environmental and public health problems require the full participation of scientists from all over the world, but Canadian scientists are missing in action due to budget cuts and constraints on their freedom to travel, communicate and collaborate.

The federal information commissioner is currently investigating the way government communication rules are limiting public access to publicly funded scientific information.

MPs vote to make Malala Yousafzai honorary citizen

The House of Commons has unanimously supported bestowing honorary Canadian citizenship upon Pakistani teenager and co-winner of this year's Nobel Peace Prize, Malala Yousafzai.

The honour comes on the eve of Yousafzai's visit to Canada to participate in an event on women's rights in Toronto.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper says she's being made an honorary Canadian in recognition of her bravery in her fight for the rights of women and girls to go to school.

Yousafzai was the target of Taliban assassins after she became an outspoken advocate for her right to attend class and she's since gone on to become an international spokesperson on the issue.

While there's no official procedure involved in granting honorary citizenship, precedent has been for the House of Commons and Senate to approve a motion.

British reporter who interviewed Magnotta in 2011 testifies at trial

Jurors at Luka Rocco Magnotta's murder trial heard testimony Wednesday from an English journalist who met the accused less than six months before Jun Lin's slaying.

Alex West is a reporter for the Sun newspaper in London who interviewed Magnotta in December 2011 at a hotel above a pub in Wembley over allegations the accused posted videos of cat killings.

A recording of the roughly 30-minute exchange between Magnotta and West, recorded secretly by the journalist, was heard in court Wednesday.

West's testimony, given from the Canadian High Commission in London, is key as the Crown set outs to prove that Magnotta's acts were planned and deliberate.

The Crown contends that the accused was planning a murder up to six months in advance. Magnotta is charged with first-degree murder in Lin's slaying and dismemberment in May 2012.

West said he was following up on a tip sent to the desk about Magnotta's whereabouts. He didn't know who Magnotta was, but a quick look provided "a plethora of Internet hits based on simple searches for his name," he testified.

The newspaper had written about an anonymous kitten killer one year earlier.

During the interview, Magnotta repeatedly denies having killed cats and posting videos online.

West said Magnotta appeared defensive but still sure of himself, even a bit cocky. No story was published based on the interview, West said.

Two days later, West and his employer received an email from a man they believed was Magnotta who suggested he was intending to kill a human and film the event in the near future.

The email, which was rife with spelling and grammatical mistakes, was written under the name John Kilbride, but referenced a meeting with West, leading the paper to believe Magnotta had authored it.

"Next time you hear from me it will be in a movie I am producing, that will have some humans in it, not just pussys. :)," the author writes near the end of the email, sent Dec. 10, 2011.

West testified that Kilbride was one of the victims of convicted serial killers Ian Brady and Myra Hindley, authors of the so-called Moors Murders in England in the mid-1960s.

He testified the paper alerted the police about the email.

"We believed this email to be from Mr. Magnotta," West said.

Magnotta, 32, has admitted the physical acts of which he's accused but has pleaded not guilty by way of mental disorder.

MPs blocked from the Commons a threat to democracy, NDP says

Hearings investigate why two MPs were delayed by a German motorcade on Parliament Hill

RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson, right, and Ottawa police Chief Charles Bordeleau, left, arrive to testify. THE CANADIAN PRESS

RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson came to a Commons committee armed with police video footage from three different security cameras and giant time-stamped photos mounted on display boards.

He took MPs second-by-second through two incidents on Parliament Hill last month. By his side at Tuesday's hour-long hearing were two other top Mounties, the head of the Ottawa Police Service and head of House of Commons security.

The issue?

NDP MP Yvon Godin and the House Speaker Andrew Scheer had been momentarily detained from getting to the Commons as German President Joachim Gauck's motorcade went on and off the Hill.

As deputy NDP Leader David Christopherson put it, this is "serious stuff."

MPs says their ability to move freely is a question of parliamentary privilege, ranking with their right to call for witnesses and documents and to say what they want in the Commons. There's also the dark symbolism of police blocking the movement of MPs.

So when Godin was prevented for a little over a minute from crossing a road to get to a Commons vote and Scheer's driver was delayed by two minutes the following day, all parties agreed the matter looked like a breach of privilege and needed to be studied.

What ensued was three days of hearings at the procedure and House affairs committee, including Paulson's testimony. MPs were able to watch video footage of Godin and others being delayed on a sidewalk as the motorcade passed by. There was also footage of Scheer's car idling at an RCMP checkpoint.

"This could easily be seen by member of the public as, 'Well, here we go, a bunch of MPs, they think they're so important...,' said Christopherson.

"There's nothing etched in stone in the universe that says that Canada remains a democracy forever.... We're here to remain on guard for democracy."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Taking action

Police will be reminded of MPs' rights

The RCMP now says it will look at having cars come onto the Hill from another entrance to avoid the possibility of delaying MPs.

The various forces will also be reminded of the privilege MPs have to move around the precinct.

The same committee dealt with a similar issue in 2012 after a visit by Israeli President Benjamin Netanyahu. After that study, police were given booklets featuring photographs of all parliamentarians.

My heart will (not) go on ... or will it?

Breaking off is hard to do. Local locksmith plays cupid, removing and saving love locks from the bridge where they're supposed to be snipped off

Love might be all you need, but for couples expressing their devotion on Edmonton's High Level Bridge, a local locksmith is coming in pretty handy.

Martin Badke has been playing cupid, removing love locks from the bridge — that otherwise face a date with a pair of bolt cutters.

Badke has photographed all the locks on the bridge and placed the images on a Facebook page. When a couple contacts him to let him know the lock is theirs, he removes it and gives it back. He's working on a plan to build a new sculpture near the bridge that would be designated to hold the locks.

He said he's inspired to help the couples whose love might be eternal, but whose locks are otherwise doomed.

"It has a sense of permanence. They're doing it because they're saying we're going to be a couple in the long-term — well the lock is going to disappear and they just don't know it."

Edmonton city spokeswoman Laura McNabb confirmed the city does regularly cut off the locks.

"The locks represent a safety concern and their consistent removal ensures the safety and security of the people and watercraft using the river and walkway below," she said.

She said the city also wants to maintain the appearance of the bridge. If the practice went unchecked, the railings wouldn't be able to support the weight.

Badke said he understands those concerns, and worries about keys tossed into the river.

"If you are going to say I love you forever, you throw away the keys — but brass is about two per cent lead."

Badke said the idea of the sculpture for love locks has been in other cities around the world and he believes it can work here, but he's still working on getting the plan off the ground.

"So far, I have to admit the committee is me," he said.

What about love!

Don't let it slip away ...

- Burn baby burn. Love locks have surfaced on bridges in Vancouver and Toronto, and are routinely snipped off by city officials. On an Ottawa bridge, the city lets the love locks remain.
- I got you babe. In Toronto, a large installation was set up in the city's distillery district to give couples a place to hang their locks of affection.
- Weight of love. A bridge in Paris suffered a partial collapse earlier this year, under the weight of too many love locks.

A love lock is attached to Edmonton's High Level Bridge. The city removes the locks regularly.

Quebecor tycoon criticizes political rivals on Facebook

Media magnate Pierre Karl Peladeau says he doesn't have to answer reporters' questions, indicating he prefers Facebook as a means of communication.

Peladeau made the comment today as he headed into a Parti Québécois caucus meeting.

The controlling shareholder of Quebecor Inc. (QBR.B) has become a Facebook aficionado in recent months, using it to criticize his political rivals.

In recent weeks, Peladeau has taken to the site to demand an apology from Health Minister Gaetan Barrette and to question Premier Philippe Couillard's ethics.

On Monday, the PQ member of the legislature for Saint-Jerome posted three public Facebook messages to go after Francois Legault, leader of the Coalition for Quebec's Future.

Some of Peladeau's political foes are urging him to make himself more available to reporters at the national assembly.

That didn't seem to sway Peladeau on Tuesday.

Pierre Karl Peladeau JACQUES BOISSINOT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

"I'm with you," he told reporters, saying he's not scared of running into them.

Peladeau said he appreciates the efficiency of communicating via social media, particularly Facebook.

"I discovered Facebook a few months after I decided to run (in last spring's election campaign). My organization set up the account."

He said he only found out about his page after he fractured a hip, a collarbone and ribs in a serious cycling accident in May.

"I was asked to have a photo taken ... and I was told the photo would be posted on Facebook.

"That's how I found out I had a Facebook page. I find it's very efficient for communicating." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ebola vaccine trials may start in January

Health. If the vaccines are declared safe, the WHO says they will be used in trials in West Africa among tens of thousands of people

Tens of thousands of doses of experimental Ebola vaccines could be available for "real-world" testing in West Africa as soon as January as long as they are deemed safe, a top World Health Organization (WHO) official said Tuesday.

Dr. Marie Paule Kieny, an assistant director general for WHO, said clinical trials that are either underway or planned in Europe, Africa and the U.S. should produce preliminary safety data on two vaccines by December.

If the vaccines are declared safe, she said they will be used in trials in West Africa beginning in January to test their effectiveness among tens of thousands of people.

"I'm not suggesting at this moment that there would be mass vaccination campaigns at population levels starting in 2015," she said, adding that none of the volunteers who take part in the trials could accidentally contract Ebola from the testing.

The next stage is to test it more broadly, including among those directly handling Ebola cases in West Africa.

The Ebola outbreak in West Africa has already killed over 4,500 people, mostly in Liberia, Guinea and Sierra Leone, since it emerged 10 months ago.

Tests indicate Spanish nurse is cured of Ebola

Conclusive tests show a Spanish nursing assistant infected with Ebola is cured of the virus, doctors said Tuesday.

Four blood tests over four days indicated Teresa Romero's system had eliminated the virus, said Dr. Jose Ramon Arribas of Madrid's Carlos III hospital.

He added that Romero, 44, will no longer be kept in isolation. She will be monitored for after effects of the virus. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former Olympic hero Pistorius gets 5 years for killing girlfriend

South Africa. Authorities say runner will be held away from general prison population because of his high profile

Oscar Pistorius GETTY IMAGES

Oscar Pistorius was taken away in a police van with barred windows Tuesday to start serving a five-year prison sentence for killing girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp.

Delivering her sentence in the North Gauteng High Court in Pretoria, Judge Thokozile Masipa cited the "gross negligence" shown by the double-amputee Olympic runner when he shot Steenkamp multiple times through a toilet cubicle door in his home.

Pistorius, who cried and retched during his murder trial, was unemotional as he stood to hear his sentence.

The world-famous runner later arrived at the nearby Kgosi Mampuru II prison in the South African capital. That facility has had problems with violence and overcrowding and is where — during the years of apartheid — death row inmates were executed before capital punishment was outlawed with the advent of democracy.

Despite the prison's reported problems, authorities said Pistorius would be held away from the general prison population because of his disability and high profile — possibly in a hospital wing or a high-security section.

Pistorius could be released after 10 months to serve the remainder under house arrest, according to legal experts. Masipa last month convicted Pistorius of culpable homicide, or negligent killing, but acquitted him of murder after he testified he mistook Steenkamp for an intruder. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

What's next

Prosecutors said they're considering whether to appeal the sentence, where Pistorius, 27, could spend less than a year in jail for killing his 29-year-old girlfriend.

Oscar Pistorius departs the North Gauteng High Court on Tuesday in Pretoria, South Africa. Pistorius has been sentenced to the maximum term of five years after being found guilty of the culpable homicide of his girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp, whom he shot, claiming he mistook her for an intruder. Feds float out a dos-and-don'ts list as drone use soars

Ottawa. With the popularity of unmanned aircraft taking off, the federal transport minister issues some guidelines

Federal Transport Minister Lisa Raitt has launched a public campaign to help make sure Canadians are flying drones safely.

Raitt announced new guidelines for the increasingly popular unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs), and trumpeted the Transport Canada website, which gives operators of drones an easy-to-read list of dos and don'ts.

Online ads and a social media campaign are to follow.

Federal Transport Minister Lisa Raitt THE CANADIAN PRESS

Those flying drones for commercial use or using devices more than 35 kilograms must apply for a special permit from the federal regulator.

Transport Canada has seen a spike in those applications, issuing 945 certificates last year — a 500 per cent jump from 2011.

Drones are being used for a range of purposes — from hobbyists to farmers surveying crops and even movie productions looking for an epic aerial shot.

Most drones range in price from a few hundred dollars for personal aircraft up to $200,000 for commercial-grade units and can be operated with a controller, similar to ones used for video games, or by a tablet or an iPhone.

Transport Canada states that UAVs cannot be flown higher than 90 metres, to limit safety concerns with other aircraft, and are required to be within the line of sight of the pilot or someone who is in contact with a pilot. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Americans not lovin' it: McDonald's sales slow

Facing slowing sales the fast-food giant's CEO says it will serve up some big marketing initiatives. KEITH SRAKOCIC/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

McDonald's CEO Don Thompson said Tuesday the company hasn't been keeping up with the times and that changes are in store for its U.S. restaurants.

Starting in January, Thompson said McDonald's will "simplify" its menu to make room for restaurants to offer options that are best-suited for their regions. To offer greater customization, he also said the company planned to expand its "Create Your Taste" offering that lets people pick the buns and toppings they want on burgers by tapping a touchscreen. The program is currently being offered in Southern California.

"We haven't been changing at the same rate as our customers' eating-out expectations," Thompson conceded during a conference call outlining the changes.

The remarks came after McDonald's said its profit sank 30 per cent in the third quarter, with sales at established locations down 3.3 per cent globally and in its flagship U.S. market. In the division encompassing Asia, where a major McDonald's supplier was shown on TV repackaging expired beef, the figure sank 9.9 per cent.

Some analysts questioned whether the moves McDonald's has in store will be enough to fix its problems. Sara Senatore, a Bernstein restaurant analyst, noted that the company efforts seem focused on marketing around its food, rather than changing recipes.

In the U.S., perceptions around the freshness and quality of its ingredients have been a problem for McDonald's. The chain has been fighting to boost sales as people gravitate toward foods they feel are more wholesome. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PERSONAL & COLLECTIVE MYTHS & COLD SEASON

GUEST COLUMN
Kate Carraway
metronews.ca

The month of October, especially in Canada, should — should — be a sacred time to enjoy too-sweet autumn-themed lattes, molting piles of leaves, and the last warm-ish days before the slow, cold months-long winter marathon to come. Also, candy.

That, though, is but a Halloween-dream, considering the annual round of news coverage and commentary about flu season and flu shots and flu prevention that seems to have totally replaced the scary warnings about candy wrapped up with razor blades that I remember from my youth. (Still scary!) Were we ever so innocent, so pre-24/7-news cycle? This year, of course, Ebola has mostly replaced flu news. What I know about Ebola is exactly nothing, other than I'm very but very abstractly terrified of it. What I do know, however, about colds and flu and germs and hand-sani-based preventative techniques is everything. Or, at least I think I do, which is its own kind of semi-practical defence against, well, every uncontrollable thing. Usually, I like the idea of "live and let live," but this gets crushed during flu season, when my serious fears about getting sick ("I'm freelance! I can't get sick!") overtake my, or any, reality.

I spend a lot of time in libraries, among people and their apparently casual relationship to germs. Regularly, I hear them snurfling (what I call the truly disgusting inhalation of whatever is brewing in their noses, like snorting, but worse). I offer them Kleenex sometimes; they rarely take it. I'm not excited to listen to or watch someone blow their nose (other than my littlest nephew, because that is actually adorable), but I'd take it over that sick, swift snort that so many people use as an alternative.

I wonder if the smart-seeming campaigns to limit germs by encouraging people to cough into their arms have led to this idea, that blowing one's nose is worse than … not. Maybe? Is it better for those germs to be shot into a tissue to spare me the snurfle-sound? I wonder, then, if my ideas about how to properly manage a nose are just my own assumptions, my own mythos, much like how I once heard that pop can cure a cold, and so I wield an icy bottle like a talisman when I get that throat-itch.

This is just the kind of stuff we make up, individually and collectively, myth or not, because in the face of everything that can go wrong all we can really do is manage the endless ideas about what is probably safe, and what might not be.

Paul Sullivan returns with Just Sayin' on Nov. 12.

This can't happen

Usually, I like the idea of "live and let live," but this gets crushed during flu season, when my serious fears about getting sick ("I'm freelance! I can't get sick!") overtake my, or any, reality.

The catch-and-release method is pretty simple when Gates is dealing with a nuisance adult raccoon. But what about when a baby critter gets separated from its mother? Well, that's a more delicate task — and Gates has designed a custom solution. (YouTube/Gates Wildlife Control)

@ShawnaLewk: Yes. Sexualization of girls starts young & costumes like these help set tone for how girls see themselves.

Spies known by gadgets they keep

Movies. Colin Firth wields a bulletproof umbrella in Kingsman, a superspy story built on the 007 tradition of glamorous gizmos

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

In the new film Kingsman: The Secret Service, Colin Firth plays a veteran of an independent international intelligence agency.

"The Kingsmen agents," he says, "are the new knights." He recruits a rookie (Taron Egerton) into the agency's training program — "the most dangerous job interview in the world" — just as twisted madman Valentine (Samuel L. Jackson), launches a plan to bring down the Kingsmen and cause world chaos.

Echoes of James Bond hang heavy over the story. There are suave spies, a warped villain in the vein of Dr. Julius No or Ernst Blofeld, an evil henchman, or in this case henchlady, named Gazelle (Sofia Boutella) who has knives where other people have feet. Above all, it has gadgets. Firth and his fellow agents — Michael Caine and Mark Strong — have umbrellas that deflect bullets and Zippo lighter hand grenades among other thingamajigs that no spy should leave home without.

Make a knight of it

"The Kingsmen agents are the new knights."

Colin Firth, who plays an international superspy in Kingsman: The Secret Service

Ever since 007 was kitted out with an attaché briefcase equipped with a folding sniper rifle, ammunition, a knife and 50 gold sovereigns in From Russia With Love, gadgets have become de rigueur in spy stories.

From jetpacks to a mobile phone with a stun gun and fingerprint scanner, Bond always had the coolest contraptions. His most famous gadget, the Aston Martin DB5, was introduced 22 minutes into Goldfinger. Bond's big rig came fortified with machine guns, ejector seats, a back shield, oil slick, rotating licence plates and tire slicers.

The car has appeared in six movies with later models featuring upgrades like a rear facing water canon, a jetpack stowed in the trunk and a cloaking shield.

Bond's awesome auto has inspired many other souped-up spy-mobiles, including the Pontiac GTO from xXx. Xander Cage's (Vin Diesel) car came with stinger missiles, parachutes, a flame-thrower and exploding hubcaps.

007 and xXx have sweet rides, but the Our Man Flint spy parody had the wildest stuff. Derek Flint's (James Coburn) watch not only told time but doubled as a microscope and his lighter had "82 different functions," he said, "83 if you want to light a cigar."

Killer heels and a va-va-boom lipstick

Whether it's I Spy's contact-lens video camera or the Swiss Army knife flamethrower-blowgun combo from the Get Smart movie, it seems the good guys get all the good gadgets, but super-villains also have some super-gizmos.

- From Russia With Love's Rosa Klebb (Lotte Lenya) did people in with a poison-tipped dagger blade embedded in the tip of her shoe.
- Helga Brandt (Karin Dor) of You Only Live Twice, meanwhile, tried to blow Bond to smithereens with a deadly lipstick bomb.

Poehler preps religious sitcom

Actress Amy Poehler will produce a new series set in a church community, according to Deadline.

In her next project for NBC, Poehler is developing a comedy on a young, agnostic woman who inherits a church and gets to know its community of strong-willed characters.

The untitled series is written by Aisha Muharrar, screenwriter and co-executive producer of Parks and Recreation, in which Poehler stars, and which is due to return in 2015 with its seventh and final season. AFP

Catchy Little Apple is China's earworm

Music. Surreal video hits 50 million views, spawns tributes and parodies, and song is even adopted as recruiting tool by Chinese army

A screenshot from the Little Apple music video. YOUTUBE/TRUE CHINA

Has China found its own Gangnam Style? From Beijing parks to Shanghai skyscrapers and in Guangzhou factories to karaoke rooms in Macau, people are singing Little Apple — a song apparently so catchy it has even won over the army and police.

Calling themselves the Chopsticks Brothers, Xiao Yang and Wang Taili are neither brothers nor composers, but are responsible for a hit that has become a nationwide phenomenon.

Xiao Pingguo (Little Apple) was originally intended to promote their latest film when it was released in July, but has proven to be an earworm — the kind of song so insistent it gets stuck in the brain.

"This song is easy to follow, the pace is basic and repetitive. Even the old ladies in public gardens are learning it quickly," said Zeng Qiumei, a marketing manager from Sichuan province.

The accompanying music video has notched up more than 50 million views on Chinese video sites such as Sohu, iQiyi and Youku.

The surreal six-minute clip begins with a botched plastic surgery operation before cutting to Xiao and Wang naked in the Garden of Eden.

They then appear in a number of sequences, including dressed as mermaids on a beach or acting as village children.

The lyrics are largely nonsense, with the chorus running, "You're my little apple, you're my little apple."

Even so, and perhaps aided by relaxed attitudes towards intellectual property in China, the tune has become ubiquitous — playing on smartphone ringtones and in shopping malls, nightclubs and gyms.

The People's Liberation Army in the city of Xian has used the song in a recruitment video, while police in Shandong last month modified the lyrics for a broadcast warning about phone-banking scams.

"We changed the words to make people aware," a police officer said in comments broadcast on CCTV.

And a clip showing soldiers dancing to Xiao Pingguo with child survivors of an August earthquake that killed 600 people in the southwest became an online sensation.

There are countless other amateur videos of groups of people dancing to the song, including flight attendants, cheerleaders, firefighters and students.

One parody brings together North Korean leader Kim Jong-Un, Barack Obama, Vladimir Putin, Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and Secretary General of the UN Ban Ki-moon.

Despite its nationwide appeal, there are few expectations that Little Apple will become the kind of global phenomenon that was Gangnam Style, the stratospheric 2012 hit by South Korea's Psy that has been viewed on YouTube more than 2.1 billion times. AFP

Alan Doyle's great big love for home

Alan Doyle THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Singing bests readings

Alan Doyle put out his first solo album back in 2012, but says that this memoir represents the most vulnerable offering of his career.

- Public readings have proven particularly daunting, Doyle laments.
- "Freaks me out, man. I'd rather sing a thousand songs to a thousand people."

Where I Belong.
Great Big Sea singer's memoir filled with fond childhood stories, not tales from the road

No matter how far Alan Doyle strayed from his uniquely enchanting hometown of Petty Harbour, N.L., he had his book to whisk him back.

The Great Big Sea frontman spent years working on his memoir Where I Belong, scribbling during long road trips, sluggish sound checks or airport lounges the world over. Ultimately, a book that was originally intended to encompass the entirety of the 45-year-old's life instead focuses almost exclusively on his pre-20s upbringing in the small fishing town.

He just found that he couldn't stop talking about Petty Harbour.

"I assumed when we started that we would eventually make our way to present day, but the time I got finished adding up all the stories I wanted to tell ... I mostly told the stories about growing up in Petty Harbour," said Doyle this week during a promotional trip to Toronto.

Doyle's cheerful childhood certainly wasn't rooted in any financial prosperity. One of four kids, Doyle was born into a tiny home on the easternmost coast of Newfoundland. The house had no bathroom and no plumbing. His parents would bathe the family with river water, collected in a plastic bucket and heated on the stove.

In the book and person, Doyle recalls his austere surroundings with nostalgic fondness.

"I had somewhere to pee," he pointed out, laughing. "We had water — in a bucket, but so what? That whole part of it was a revelation in my adult life. In retrospect, we had less than perhaps North Americans my age had, but I never spent any time thinking about what we didn't have. We had more than enough for me."

Still, Doyle went to work young. At 10 he was already immersed in the wharf, rising early each summer day and heading to the harbour to cut cod tongues (considered a delicacy in parts of the world) then hawking the bounty to various vendors around town.

Much of the book is devoted to Doyle's wistful recollections of growing up in that environment — and its opportunities for innocent hijinks.

As a 10-year-old, hanging out with rough-and-tumble guys in their 20s all day was "intoxicating," Doyle said.

While Where I Belong isn't a traditional rock memoir, Doyle says it ties into his music career to a greater extent than it might initially seem.

"Without being aware of it, my young life almost perfectly prepared me for the greatest job anyone could have ever been offered," he said.

"All the stuff that happened to me in my little tiny fishing town and my little altar boy life, all of a sudden, it's like, man, I'm perfect for this job. Every question that was asked of me I said, yes, of course I know how to do that. Of course I can do that.

"'This is going to be really hard on the road.' What? We have a toilet. This is easy."

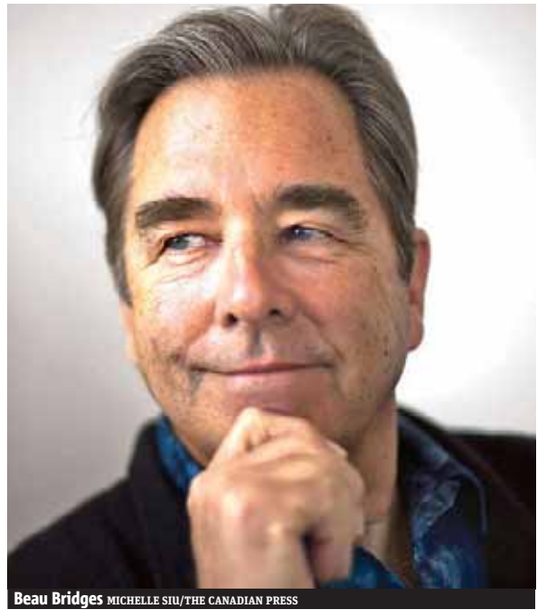
Comedy's the thing to master: Bridges

TV. Star of The Millers and Masters of Sex says sitcom roles are tougher than drama



Beau Bridges MICHELLE SIU/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Beau Bridges can currently be seen on TV as a closeted gay academic in drama Masters of Sex and a doofus dad in sitcom The Millers.

So which role does he find more difficult?

"I think making people laugh is probably one of the most difficult things to pull off. Comedy is tough. I think it's even harder than drama," he said in a summer interview.

The Millers returns for a second season Thursday on CTV. Bridges plays Tom, the bumbling father of local news reporter Nathan Miller (Will Arnett).

When Nathan announces he's getting divorced, Tom and his wife Carol (Margo Martindale) decide to split up, too.

The light half-hour comedy from showrunner Greg Garcia (My Name is Earl) sees Carol move in with her son and Tom impose himself on their daughter Debbie (Jayma Mays) and her family. While the kids try to cope with their infuriating parents, Tom and Carol venture into the dating world after 43 years of marriage.

He said he found The Millers challenging at first because he didn't have much experience filming a multi-camera sitcom in front of a studio audience. But he quickly embraced the live experience.

"The great thing about it is you get the immediate comeback to see how you're doing," he said. "What's difficult is putting on a new play every week and always changing things up all the time. You rehearse it for the writers every day, they come in with new stuff the next day, then even when we're performing it, if a joke doesn't work, they'll write another one and slip it to you right there on the spot.

"That made me real nervous in the beginning, but I found out quickly that the audience enjoys it more when you're making a mistake. They laugh and that helps me kind of relax and say, 'Oh, OK, I get it. So I don't have to worry about that.'"

In Showtime's Masters of Sex, about pioneering sexuality researchers William Masters and Virginia Johnson, Bridges plays Provost Barton Scully, who is gay but has been in a decades-long marriage to Margaret (Allison Janney).

"Allison Janney, who plays my wife in Masters of Sex, she and Margo Martindale are friends. They know each other. So you know they're probably talking about me all the time behind my back," he said. "But Allison is great as well. Our scenes are very dramatic, very different from what I have with Margo, which is all hysterically funny."

When it comes to switching back and forth between a comedy and a drama, Bridges said he relies on the script.

"I've always felt that the most important element in any show is the script itself. Like Shakespeare said a long time ago, the play's the thing. I think that's still true. And in those instances, The Millers and Masters of Sex, they're, I think, beautifully written, both of them, for what they are," he said.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Hollywood women Garner wrong kind of attention

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Emma Watson's influence must be rubbing off. Jennifer Garner was honoured at Elle magazine's Women in Hollywood benefit earlier this week, and she used the name of the event as a jumping off point for a pretty awesome speech about sexism in Hollywood. Here it is:

"The fact that there even needs to be a Women in Hollywood event is a little bit sad. I mean, the Men in Hollywood event is every day — it's called Hollywood. Fifty-one per cent of the population should not have to schedule a special event to celebrate the fact that in an art that tells the story of what it means to be human and alive, we get to play a part.

"So for example, my husband and I do kind of the same job, a little bit. Not long ago we both had one of those magical days, we call it a junket, where we both attended these lovely events where people come in every four minutes, they ask the same questions over and over again, you know the drill. We got home at night and we compared notes. And I told him every single person who interviewed me, I mean every single one — and this is true of the red carpet here tonight, Elle — asked me, 'How do you balance work and family?' and he said the only thing that people asked him repeatedly was about the tits on the Blurred Lines girl, which, for the record if we're talking about them, they are real and they are fabulous ... As for work-life balance, he said no one asked him about it that day. As a matter of fact, no one had ever asked him about it. And we do share the same family. Isn't it time to kind of change that conversation?"

All valid points, and cleverly made. I'm all for asking Affleck about how he juggles it all the next time I interview him. But does that mean I have to ask Garner about Emily Ratajkowski's rack, too?

Katy Perry

This is how you do Happy Birthday when you wanna impress Katy

Katy Perry is turning 30 this Saturday, and her friends are pulling out all the stops. Over the weekend, she made one of her birthday wishes known — and it's kind of adorably hokey. "All I want for my birthday is my name on the Shakey's Pizza marquee on Santa Monica Blvd. Please," she tweeted. Well, Katy, ask and ye shall receive. Sort of. In no time, the message "Happy birthday Katy Perry from Sophia" (from pal and Hello Giggles co-founder Sophia Rossi) popped up on a Shakey's. Only it was the Shakey's on Olympic, not Santa Monica. But Perry's not being picky about that bit and is still apparently thrilled, calling the mention "a bucket list dream come true." Some people are just really easy to shop for.

Justin visits the Vatican in true Belieber style

After a year of very grown-up trouble, it's nice to see Justin Bieber getting back to the kind of juvenile shenanigans that made him such a lovable scamp to begin with. Pop's reigning tiny tyrant took a trip to the Vatican recently, where he was scolded by staff during a tour for kicking a soccer ball around the halls. Oh, that Bieber. Always getting up to something! Justin, you know you're not supposed to play ball inside the house of the Lord. It's also worth noting that the Vatican usually enforces a strict dress code for visitors to its museums, a dress code that bars shorts and hats. No word on whether Bieber got scolded for that as well, though.

Rivers still making waves from beyond the grave

Apparently Joan Rivers left some instructions that her executors are finding a little tough to follow through on. "Joan requested that after she is gone that her personal diaries be turned into a book," a source tells Radar Online. "The problem is that they are having a real hard time shopping it around because of how over-the-top and defamatory it is." Sounds about right for Rivers. So, how defamatory are we really talking here? "Joan bashes celebrities and politicians in first-hand accounts throughout her life. Among her biggest revelations is that President Barack Obama is gay, which is something that she had joked about while she was alive." Oh. Oh, I see.

LIFE 3

Two creepy Ontario sites

Forget pumpkin patches and haunted hay rides, this Halloween season, check out these freaky locales scattered around our province. The following are excerpts of some of the creepier places included in Ron Brown's 125 Unusual Things to See in Ontario, which is now available in bookstores.

The Tell-Tale Grave: The Donnelly tombstone

A century ago, the "Black Donnellys" and their untimely demise in Lucan, Ont., were the talk of North America. On a bitterly cold night in February 1880, a local vigilante gang attacked two homes belonging to a family of Irish immigrants named the Donnellys, and brutally butchered five. Members of several prominent local families stood accused of the grisly slaughter — among them, the sheriff. Daily newspaper reports of the trial kept the English-speaking world transfixed for months. The first trial resulted in a hung jury. In the second, the judge, allegedly following instructions from his political masters who were seeking re-election, ordered the jury to disregard the testimony of a youthful witness, and the vigilantes went free. The Lucan Area Heritage and Donnelly Museum at 171 Main St. in Lucan (north of London) recounts the tragedy, while the current owner of the homestead property hosts group tours (by appointment only), vividly re-enacting the events of that deadly night. The strongest reminder of that night lies in the graveyard of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church, the very church where the sworn enemies had even worshipped together. That reminder is the marble headstone listing all the names of the family members who were cut down that night.

Toronto Island's haunted lighthouse

Ontario's oldest standing lighthouse is haunted, some say, by the ghost of its first keeper. Constructed of huge limestone blocks, the hexagonal 20-metre structure was built in 1808 at Gibraltar Point, on what is now the Toronto Island archipelago, before there was a Toronto, and even before there were islands. (In 1834 the Town of York became the City of Toronto. The islands were actually a peninsula until 1858, when a vicious storm hurled waves across its narrow, sandy neck, severing it from the mainland.) When the lighthouse was completed, John Paul Radan Muller was appointed its keeper and he moved into a small log cabin beside it. In April 1813, he watched helplessly as Colonel Pearce guided 14 American ships past the lighthouse and landed the troops that would capture York, in one of the few American victories of the War of 1812. Just two years later, Radan Muller disappeared in circumstances that the York Gazette described as "moral proof of having been murdered." It would later add that there was "no conviction of the supposed murder." Was he murdered by drunken companions? Did he renege on a bootlegging operation being run from the military base? Although the former whale-oil lamp has been replaced by modern navigational aids, the lighthouse remains virtually unaltered. Today, Gibraltar Point is a passive recreational area where trees, grass and trails have replaced the buildings of a bygone day. And the changes are all carefully watched over by the lighthouse and its keeper.

Move aside, traditional pie crust

Fennel Scrunch Meat Pie. This dish uses phyllo crust to offer a delicate topping that enhances the flavours contained underneath

DINNER EXPRESS
Emily Richards
food@metronews.ca

During the fall entertaining season, if you have a smaller family, you may want a smaller amount of protein to serve to your guests.

This meat pie offers up that option while including everyone's favourite Greek influences in the flavours. It is also a great weeknight dinner choice for your family.

Most traditional meat pies have a pastry crust but this version has a light, crisp phyllo crust that is uniquely shaped by scrunching up the phyllo to put it on top of the pie. Its delicate texture enhances the tasty meat filling.

You can do this for fruit pies as well, as long as the filling is cooked inside.

If you want to make this dinner pie ahead of time, simply make the filling and place it in the pie plate.

When you are ready to finish it off, take it out of the refrigerator and top it with the phyllo to bake.

You can also try making mini versions of this dish in small ramekins and cut the phyllo sheets in half to top them.

This creamy and delicious dinner pie will surprise everyone at the table.

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp (30 ml) extra virgin olive oil
- Half fennel bulb, chopped
- 6 green onions, chopped
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tsp (5 ml) fennel seeds, crushed
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) each salt and pepper
- 1 lb (454 g) lean ground turkey, chicken or veal
- 4 cups (1 l) baby spinach, chopped
- 1 cup (250 ml) 35% whipping cream
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) seasoned bread crumbs
- 3/4 cup (175 ml) crumbled Greek feta cheese
- 6 sheets phyllo pastry
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) butter, melted

1. In a large nonstick skillet heat the extra virgin oil over medium high heat Add fennel, green onions, garlic and fennel seeds, season with salt and pepper then cook for about 5 minutes or until they are softened.

2. Add the ground turkey, chicken or veal and cook, breaking up meat for about 8 minutes or until no longer pink. Add the baby spinach and cook for 3 minutes or until it is wilted.

3. Add the whipping cream and bring to a boil, simmer stirring occasionally for about 5 minutes or until most of the cream is absorbed. Stir in the seasoned bread crumbs until the mixture is well combined. Scrape everything into a 10-inch (25 cm) pie plate. Sprinkle with the crumbled feta cheese.

4. Lay 1 sheet of phyllo out on a work surface and brush it with butter. Gently crumple it up and place on top of pie, starting at one edge. Repeat with remaining phyllo sheets to cover the top of the pie.

5. Bake the Fennel Scrunch Meat Pie in a 425 F oven for about 12 minutes or until phyllo is golden brown and filling is bubbly. Serve it with a Greek salad to complete this Greek-inspired dish.

This recipe makes six servings. EMILY RICHARDS

Mustard elevates veg pie

This Dijon Tomato and Sweet Onion Pie recipe serves six. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 9-inch raw pie shell, fitted in pan
- 1 small sweet onion
- 3 to 4 small heirloom tomatoes
- 1 1/4 cups each grated sharp cheddar and Gruyere cheese
- 2/3 cup mayonnaise
- 1 tbsp each whole-grain Dijon and smooth Dijon mustard
- Ground black pepper
- 1 small bunch fresh basil (about 10 leaves), thinly sliced

1. Heat the oven to 350 F. Bake the pie shell until lightly golden, about 15 minutes. Remove from the oven and set aside to cool. Leave the oven on.

2. While pie shell bakes, thinly slice onion and tomatoes. Arrange tomato slices on paper towels to absorb moisture.

3. In a medium bowl, mix together both cheeses, the mayonnaise, both mustards and a generous pinch of pepper. The mixture should be thick, but spread easily.

4. Spread thin layer of cheese mix over bottom of pie shell. Top mix with half of onion slices, then half of tomato slices, followed by remaining onions, then remaining tomatoes. Spread the rest of the cheese mixture over the tomatoes. Bake until browned and bubbly, 40 to 45 minutes.

5. Remove the pie from the oven and let rest for 10 minutes. Cut into slices, then top each serving with some of the basil. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ ELIZABETH KARMEL, AUTHOR OF PIZZA ON THE GRILL

Entrepreneurship calls for a range of abilities that don't always come naturally.

That's one reason some people find the prospect of starting their own business intimidating. It's also why many of those who pursue that path find themselves struggling to succeed.

It's important to remember that launching a startup is not just a career choice — it's a life choice. So how do you know whether you are cut out to be an entrepreneur before making the leap?

Passion

All great entrepreneurs are passionate: They live, breathe and eat their business idea.

Being passionate about your business will drive your success. If you aren't committed to what you are selling or doing, how do you expect anyone else to be?

Success in any career path usually calls for commitment, but entrepreneurship means taking it to the next level. You'll need to be ready to give 110 per cent — and maybe re-evaluate what that means.

Open-mindedness

A top asset in life and work, open-mindedness is a must-have in a new entrepreneur's toolbox. In order to grow any business into a successful one, you are going to have to be open to critiques from your customers, other entrepreneurs and mentors. These people can offer the most valuable advice and lessons that can move your business forward.

Open-mindedness can also help you implement changes or fine tune things without getting bogged down by your own preferences, helping you focus on what is most likely to drive success.

Closed-minded entrepreneurs will struggle to improve and may not find room to grow and flourish.

Time management

Entrepreneurship is not a typical nine-to-five job. You'll need to be ready to work long hours, often juggling multiple projects, particularly during high-growth periods or periods of high demand.

Many entrepreneurs have other professional obligations which can add extra time constraints, including part- or full-time employment. Using your time efficiently will allow you to accomplish much more. Time management skills will contribute to the success of your business as it's easy to lose track of priorities, which can compromise key aspects of your business.

Leadership

Don't think of an entrepreneur as a lone wolf. As your operations grow, you'll need to lead a team and connect them with your passion for the business — a challenge that demands the ability to build rapport and keep everyone focused on specific goals.

Leadership also calls for accountability.

As you set expectations and goals for your team, you'll have to be ready to show that you hold yourself accountable for overall success and accept your position as a key motivator.

Being a leader will not only benefit your staff in the long run; the confidence and competence that a leader possesses will be beneficial in all aspects of your business.

TALENTEGG.CA IS CANADA'S LEADING JOB SITE AND ONLINE CAREER RESOURCE FOR COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND RECENT GRADUATES.

Self-starter

Entrepreneurs cannot just sit back and wait for success to find them.

- The most important stage of the entrepreneurship process (getting things off the ground) will test your self-starting abilities to the max, but you'll also need to deploy this skill throughout your career as an entrepreneur.
- You must be a self-starter in order to achieve long-term success. Self-starters don't depend on others needlessly. They know that in order to succeed, they will have to make and reach their goals on their own.
- Entrepreneurship takes determination and commitment, and someone who doesn't have the drive to accomplish that on their own may not be the best candidate for starting their own business.

So when do I sleep?

You'll need to be ready to work long hours, often juggling multiple projects, particularly during high-growth periods or periods of high demand.

Education. The benefits of teaching young learners to master the strategy of the game

LAKSHMI GANDHI
Metro in New York City

Make your move to a pastime that sparks the smarts. ISTOCK

Chess dates back to sixth-century India and has long been associated with strategy and concentration. Schools and after-school programs are capitalizing on the game as a way to teach students how to think critically and manage difficult situations.

"Chess is a game of calculation," says Michael Propper, the director of Chess NYC, New York's largest chess organization.

We talked to Propper about some of the academic and social benefits of children playing chess.

It forces kids to think outside the box

"Every move you make has a consequence," says Propper. "It's a sport, and we treat it as such."

He says young chess players approach problems in novel ways after learning the rules of the game.

It enhances math skills

"It's a game that helps you think scientifically, it helps critical thinking skills and it helps enhance math skills," he points out, noting that many students grow stronger in math and science in particular.

"Chess is a game of calculation. It assists you in calculating and focus."

Because of that, it's probably no surprise that students who play chess tend to gravitate toward the sciences.

"Some of them have that natural reasoning ability," says Propper. "The other half start to develop it."

Chess also helps you think like a programmer.

The skills students learn playing chess also lend themselves to the world of coding.

"(There's) symmetry between chess and coding," says Propper. Building on that connection, Chess NYC has just introduced a coding class for students in its camps and after-school programs.

Playing also helps socializing skills

Programs like Chess NYC expand horizons by having young players compete against players of all ages and backgrounds. Propper notes that the oldest chess player in his organization is 104. "It helps them make friends and socially feel more confident," he notes.

Actions and reactions

"Every move you make has a consequence. It's a sport, and we treat it as such."

Michael Propper, Director of Chess NYC

Eyes on the prize

Chess is the original role-playing game

- Propper says he and the rest of the Chess NYC staff aren't concerned about losing their students' attention spans to common distractions like video games or the Internet. "Chess is (like) a video game," he replies. "Once you start to do it, it's absolutely addictive and a lot more fun."

Local shops are what make a community

Yellow Pages campaign encourages people to shop at local businesses this holiday season

There are more than one million small businesses in Canada, and they employ close to half of the country's workforce. In today's global marketplace, with its myriad of online-shopping choices that are just a mouse click away, it's easy to forget about the positive impacts that our dollars have when we spend them at retailers in our own communities, whether it's at a store that makes handmade chocolates, natural skin-care products or microbrewed beer or at an independent bookstore.

Shop The Neighbourhood is a free initiative by Yellow Pages that aims to raise awareness of the important role that small businesses play in creating healthy, thriving neighbourhoods. Special events marking this campaign will take place on Saturday, Nov. 29, in Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Calgary, and Vancouver.

"Small businesses are the lifeblood of neighbourhoods across Canada. They give our communities their uniqueness and are often the reason we're drawn to specific areas," says François Ramsay, senior vice-president, corporate affairs at Yellow Pages.

It's important to note that Shop The Neighbourhood is more than just a single day of recognition for the economic treasures that our small businesses are. During the six weeks leading up to Nov. 29, an awareness campaign will promote the positive impacts of supporting small businesses and shopping locally. This will be capped off with a day in which residents are officially encouraged to make a local purchase at a participating business and take advantage of exclusive event-day deals.

Nov. 29 falls between Black Friday and Cyber Monday, two days when Canadians tend to cross the border to the United States or go online to take advantage of bargains and get a head start on holiday shopping.

Yellow Pages consciously chose to put Shop The Neighbourhood between those two days, to provide Canadians with local shopping choices with their own exclusive deals and savings offered by neighbourhood businesses.

YELLOW PAGES SUPPORTS SMALL BUSINESSES

The digital gap between consumers and Canada's businesses is widening: three-quarters of Canadians research purchases online, but less than half of small businesses in Canada have an online presence, according to a 2014 Canadian Internet Registration Authority (CIRA) report. What's more, a recent Statistics Canada study revealed that cross-border shopping by Canadians in the United States rose 72 per cent between 2006 and 2012, with Canadians spending $8 billion in the U.S. in 2012 alone.

Yellow Pages, a Canadian digital media and marketing solutions company, has a century-long legacy of working with small businesses in communities across Canada. Through its business operations, Yellow Pages strives to help businesses close that digital gap through its service offering. Now, with Shop The Neighbourhood, it's allowing participating businesses to experiment with online and mobile marketing by hosting a promotion for free on Yellow Pages digital properties.

HOW IT ALL BEGAN

Shop The Neighbourhood was originally piloted by Yellow Pages in downtown Oakville, Ont., in February 2013; from there it was expanded to the Greater Toronto Area in November of that same year.

Post-event research showed that more than 50 per cent of people in the GTA who had heard of the campaign purposely chose to make a local purchase that day, while more than 80 per cent said that it directly influenced their shopping habits. "Our Shop The Neighbourhood initiative is a reminder to all Canadians of how important it is to support local businesses as the impacts of that support extend to the hearts of our communities," says Ramsay. "On Nov. 29 this year, show your support for neighbourhood businesses by making a local purchase."

If all Canadians choose to buy locally — both during Shop The Neighbourhood and throughout the rest of the year — small businesses will be strengthened and, as a result, so will the neighbourhoods in which we live, work and play. To participate in Shop The Neighbourhood as a business or a shopper, visit shoptheneighbourhood.ca.

Deals are available on the following platforms: YP.ca, the Yellow Pages mobile app, the ShopWise mobile app, and on shoptheneighbourhood.ca. You can also show your support by joining the Shop The Neighbourhood Facebook page or Twitter account or by following the hashtag #shopthehood.

SMALL BUSINESS, BIG BENEFITS

According to Industry Canada, "approximately 100,000 small businesses are created in Canada each year. Small businesses also employ 40 per cent of Canada's private sector workforce."

Here are just three benefits that small businesses offer their communities:

1 Keep dollars in the area. Money spent within neighbourhoods directly benefits the local economy and tends to be reinvested within the community in the form of local employment or the contracting of locally based supplies and services.

2 Keep decision-making power close to home. Local ownership means that business operation and activities that may affect the community are made locally, by people aware of the impacts that those decisions have on the surrounding area.

3 Promote close-knit neighbourhoods. Local business owners and staff share the community's interests and are often personally invested in the welfare and future of the neighbourhood.

Buying local means supporting small, neighbourhood businesses that directly contribute to building healthy, thriving communities. Shop The Neighbourhood is a Yellow Pages initiative encouraging Canadians nationwide to make local purchases on November 29th.

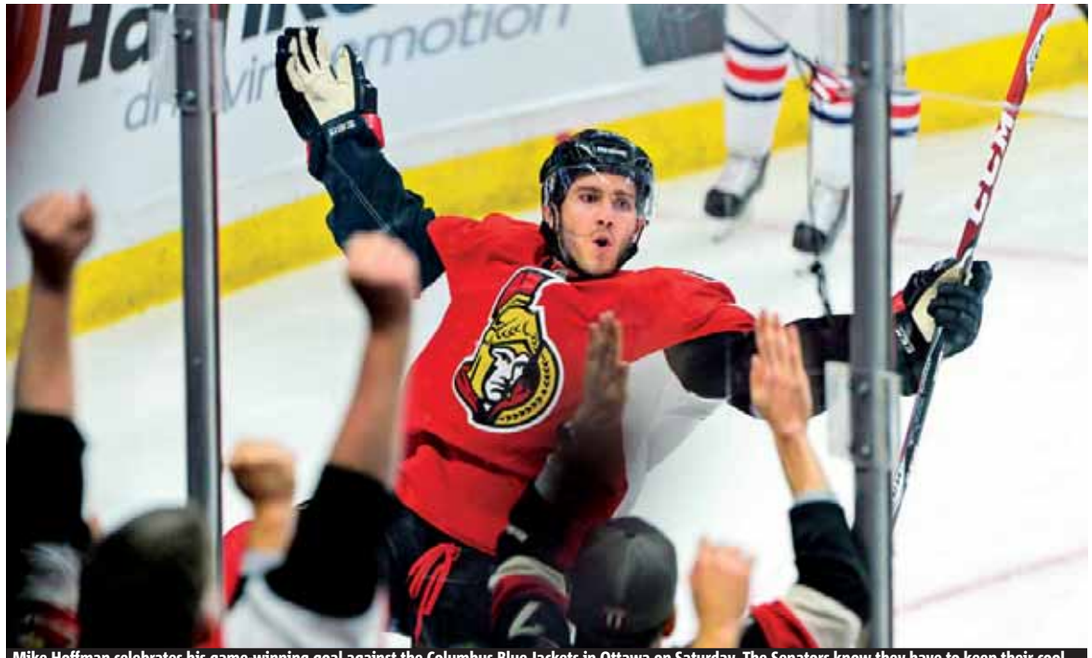
Leafs in town. Sens try to put rivalry aside to focus on their game for a fifth straight win



Mike Hoffman celebrates his game-winning goal against the Columbus Blue Jackets in Ottawa on Saturday. The Senators know they have to keep their cool against the Maple Leafs on Wednesday night at Canadian Tire Centre to extend their early season success. SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Ottawa Senators know they have to keep their emotions in check when the rival Toronto Maple Leafs come to Canadian Tire Centre.

The Leafs have dominated the Senators for much of the past two years, winning seven straight games until Ottawa shut out Toronto 1-0 in the second-last game of the season last year.

This season, the Senators (4-1-0) are off to an impressive start and have a chance to win a fifth straight game when they host Toronto on Wednesday.

While the provincial rivals have an antagonistic history, Senators coach Paul MacLean said his players need to remember to not get caught up in the hype.

"We just have to make sure we're prepared and we're not overdoing it," said MacLean. "We just have to be ready to play."

MacLean doesn't like to focus too much on whom the Senators are playing, believing that each and every game should be considered as important as the last.

"Every game is the biggest game of the year, the one you're playing," said MacLean.

Make some noise

"These are always exciting games because the building is so loud. It's a lot of fun to play, but you can't be taken aback by the noise levels."

Ottawa centre Zack Smith on playing against the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Clarke MacArthur, a former member of the Leafs, said it will be important for the Senators to play smart.

"You want to keep your emotions in check," MacArthur said. "We gave these guys a lot of opportunities to get back in games against us with power plays. They have a great power play."

Last season the Leafs went 17-for-21 with the man advantage in four games against the Senators. Considering all but one were one-goal games, the Senators know how crucial special teams will be.

After five games this season, the Senators have allowed just three power-play goals in 17 opportunities.

A strong start will be key for the Senators, as they will want to take the inevitable vocal contingent of Leaf fans out of the game.

Despite their strong start, the Senators are still giving an average of 35.6 shots per game to rank 27th in the league. Goaltenders Craig Anderson and Robin Lehner, who have shared the workload to this point in the season, have been solid.

MacLean refrained from naming his starting goaltender for Wednesday's game, but said he would be comfortable putting either one in the lineup.

Young blood vital to Sens winning streak

THE HOCKEY NEWS

Winners of four of their first five games, the Ottawa Senators are one of this season's early surprises. A third-period opening night meltdown in Nashville is the only thing keeping them from a perfect record. The club's 4-1 start is their best since 2007-08.

Despite their early success, it hasn't been all rosy. A blemish last season, the team continues to give up an exorbitant amount of shots, 35.6 per game.

Fresh off an inconsistent 2013-14 campaign, defenceman Jared Cowen has been a healthy scratch the past three games. Colin Greening has cracked the lineup but once — not a good sign for a player in his first year of a three-year deal.

Mika Zibanejad is also struggling. Is the pressure of being inserted as the second-line centre getting to him?

But coach Paul MacLean and his staff are seeing a lot of positives, starting in the most important area: between the pipes. Craig Anderson and Robin Lehner are providing stellar netminding.

The Senators also appear to be mending their ways early on. Players have spent an average of three minutes per game less in the sin bin than last season — music to MacLean's ears.

Most of all the youngsters are stepping up. Right wing Mark Stone is fitting in seamlessly on the first line. Mike Hoffman's highlight reel goal was the difference Saturday. Defenceman Mark Borowiecki is clearing it like a grizzled veteran. And 19-year-old Curtis Lazar comes as advertised: a tireless worker who can play in all situations.

On deck Wednesday is the Battle of Ontario. It will be interesting how this new core fares.

NHL. Hunter leaves family comfort of Knights for big-league challenge in T.O.

Mark Hunter is leaving the junior-hockey empire he helped build with the London Knights to join an NHL empire with the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Hunter was named the Maple Leafs' director of player personnel on Tuesday. He will oversee the team's pro and amateur scouting and player-evaluation departments.

For the past 14 years, the Petrolia, Ont., native co-owned the Knights of the Ontario Hockey League with brother Dale and served as vice-president and general manager. Mark Hunter briefly filled in as coach when his brother joined the Washington Capitals for the majority of the 2011-12 season.

Durant already antsy after surgery

Thunder forward Kevin Durant says he has been antsy since finding out he will miss the early part of the season with a broken bone in his right foot.

The reigning MVP spoke to the media Tuesday for the first time since the injury. He had surgery on Oct. 16 and will be re-evaluated in about five weeks. He rolled into the media session on a scooter with the lower half of his right leg in a cast.

Durant says he's never had surgery, so he doesn't know how he will respond to it. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cowboys release openly gay player

Michael Sam will have to wait for a third team to give the NFL's first openly gay player a chance to appear in a regular-season game.

The Dallas Cowboys released Sam from the practice squad Tuesday, dropping the rush end as they prepare for several potential reinforcements to return to the defensive line.

Sam spent seven weeks with the Cowboys after joining their practice squad Sept. 3, four days after he was among the final cuts by the St. Louis Rams at the end of the pre-season.

NFL. Manning quickly shifts focus to San Diego

No more fun and games for Peyton Manning.

OK, it was "hat day" for the Denver Broncos, who didn't don helmets or pads at practice Tuesday. Still, the new record-holder for most career touchdown passes made it clear he has put his historic Sunday night performance against San Francisco behind him.

That's because Philip Rivers and the San Diego Chargers (5-2) are making another Thursday night visit to Sports Authority Field.

"It's a short week and we've got to shift our focus to a really good team that we're very familiar with," Manning said. "As much as you're happy about winning, you have to put it behind you and move on."

Relentless Bayern causes Roma to fall

Shades of Brazil. Munich has scored 13 goals in last two games after laying 7-1 beatdown on AS Roma

Arjen Robben scored twice as Bayern Munich routed Roma 7-1 on Tuesday for a club-record away win in the Champions League, showing the German club is once again among the favourites to take the title.

Having taken target practice in a 6-0 rout of Werder Bremen at the weekend, it was more of the same from Bayern early on at the Stadio Olimpico with five goals in the first half.

Robben put the 2013 champion ahead nine minutes in with an expertly curled shot from a tough angle, before Germany's World Cup hero Mario Goetze doubled the lead in the 23rd and Robert Lewandowski made it 3-0 in the 25th.

Again taking advantage of poor defence from Ashley Cole, Robben scored his second goal on the half-hour and then Thomas Mueller added a penalty in the 35th after Kostas Manolas was whistled for a handball at the edge of the area.

Gervinho pulled one back for Roma in the 66th, 10 minutes after hitting the post, but then substitutes Franck Ribery and Xherdan Shaqiri added more goals for Bayern.

Bayern's previous biggest away win in the Champions League was a 5-0 win at Sporting Lisbon in the first knockout round in 2009. It matched Roma's heaviest defeat, a 7-1 loss at Manchester United in the 2007 quarter-finals.

"This is a fluke," Bayern coach Josep Guardiola said. "It's not normal to win 7-1."

But Bayern is starting to look like the Barcelona squad that Guardiola coached to two Champions League titles. The Spaniard took over Bayern last season and saw his club lose 5-0 on aggregate to Real Madrid in the semifinals.

Bayern has nine points atop Group E, five clear of Roma.

2015 Kia Forte5

- Type. Four-door, 5-passenger compact hatchback
- Engines. 2.0-litre four-cylinder (173 hp); 1.6-litre turbocharged four (201)
- Transmissions. Six-speed manual or automatic
- Base price. $19,495 base, $28,795 as-tested

Market position

Although it shares platforms and engineering with parent company Hyundai, Kia is becoming more of a performance brand, adding turbo power to some of its models, along with new styling under the direction of former Audi designer Peter Schreyer.

Points

- The Forte has three configurations: the four-door Forte sedan, the Forte5 hatchback, and the two-door Forte Koup.
- You get a lot of features in the SX model, but there's a lot of hard plastic, so it doesn't always look as high-end as you'd expect.
- Kia's warranty covers almost everything for five years or 100,000 km.

The car has tons of cargo space, plus cubbies under the floor.

Review. Sharp-looking hatchback is tuned for sportiness but still fuel-efficient and comfortable to drive

JIL MCINTOSH
drive@metronews.ca

Although Kia initially entered the Canadian market by focusing almost exclusively on price, it now has added performance and styling to the list, even on its compact Forte models.

Redesigned in 2014, the Forte5 hatchback now includes a turbocharged 1.6-litre four-cylinder engine in its top SX trim line, the model I tested. The base engine is a 2.0-litre four-cylinder that makes 173 horsepower, while the turbo model spins out 201 horses.

You can get both engines with a six-speed manual transmission, but mine was a six-speed automatic.

Pricing for the 2015 models starts at $19,495 for the LX+, while the SX starts at $24,195 and rises to $28,795 for the fully loaded package.

The Forte5 has morphed from a relatively plain car into a sharp-looking model, with its tiger-shark grille, flared wheel arches and upswept body lines.

Inside, the redesigned interior features an upgraded instrument cluster, a new steering wheel, and numerous cubbies for small-item storage, including a covered bin where you can plug in and hide your electronics.

The interior features an upgraded instrument cluster and numerous cubbies.

Heated front seats are standard on all models, and the SX Luxury adds heated rear seats and a driver's seat that's also cooled. Unfortunately, the front-seat passenger doesn't get one as well.

The rear seats fold flat for extra cargo space, and there are more hidden storage bins under the cargo floor.

The turbo Forte5 is fast and fun to pilot, but it feels more like a daily driver that's quick on its feet, rather than a harsh sports model that could get tiring after a while.

The suspension is sport-tuned but still comfortable, although I'd like to get a little more steering feel from the wheel.

It runs on regular-grade gasoline, and I averaged 8.7 L/100 km in my week with it.

Not everyone will need the turbo's power, so the 2.0-litre should be enough for many drivers, and at a lower price. Be sure to test drive both if the Forte5 is on your list.

Compare

1 Hyundai Elantra GT
Base price: $18,449
The Elantra GT is the Forte5's sibling, but it comes with only the 2.0-litre engine — not the turbocharged option.

2 Mazda3 Sport
Base price:$16,995
"Sport" means it's a hatchback, but it's also sporty and sharp-handling, with a choice of two engines.

3 Ford Focus Hatchback
Base price: $19,699
Available with a 160-hp engine, a 252-hp turbo, or even as an all-electric model.

Still chasing the King of Cool

Whether he was racing Porsches in LeMans, fleeing Nazis in Germany or tearing up the streets of San Francisco, Steve McQueen's silver-sceen chase scenes remain legendary several decades after his death in 1980

I Am Steve McQueen. HBO documentary traces star's passion for speed

It's been said that film legend Steve McQueen couldn't decide if he was an actor who raced cars or a race-car driver who acted.

In fact, the movie star's love for racing was so well-documented that it's assumed the animated Cars character Lightning McQueen was named after the King of Cool.

"There's no question that if he could write (a car chase) into a script, that was something he was passionate about," says film producer Derik Murray, who recently finished a documentary called I Am Steve McQueen.

Off-screen, McQueen owned an extensive collection of vehicles, ranging from Ferraris and Porsches to Mustangs and motorcycles.

With Murray's film premiering on HBO Canada Oct. 25, we take a look at the actor's most iconic onscreen vehicles.

1968 Mustang GT, Bullitt

The Film Role: Famous for its extended cop-and-robber chase scene through San Francisco, the Mustang steals the show.

"His character needed to have a car that was performance-orientated for the chase scenes," explains Murray. "That's how they arrived at that '68 Fastback."

History: Only about 42,000 of these cars were made and about a third of those were the GT spec. The Fastback's 325-hp V8 engine helped make the Mustang the crown prince of the muscle-car market.

Murray: "(Filmmakers) completely outfitted them so that they could withstand the crazy jumping through the streets. One of them at the end of the movie had to be wrecked because it was totally unsafe." McQueen's son, Chad, retraced the San Francisco chase route in 2001, driving a replica 1968 GT (photo above).

Triumph TR6 motorcycle, The Great Escape

The Film Role: In the wartime drama, German soldiers chase McQueen across rolling fields in this classic motorcycle (disguised as a German BMW R75), and he eventually jumps the bike over a barbed-wire fence. The actor did many of the stunts himself.

History: McQueen discovered the 1961 Triumph while attending the 1964 International Six Days Trials. It was built for quieter operation with a modified head angle and much-improved balance (which would've helped for jumping).

Murray: "Steve influenced the idea of a motorcycle and the idea of a chase and a jump," says Murray. "Triumph did kind of an homage to that bike (and released) a thousand of those bikes."

McQueen performed many of the stunts himself during the iconic motorcycle chase scene, but not the dramatic fence jump.

Porsche 917, LeMans

The Film Role: McQueen's passion for racing led him to make 1971's LeMans — a film that aimed to accurately depict the 24-hour endurance race in France.

History: Designed specifically for victory at LeMans, the Porsche 917 had an air-cooled 12-cylinder engine and streamlined bodywork. It reached top speeds of more than 350 km/h.

Murray: "At one time, I heard that Jerry Seinfeld owned it," says Murray of the actual car from the movie. "(McQueen's son) Chad kept some of the vehicles but, for the most part, everything else was auctioned off."

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You are being too negative about the future. What happens this week will encourage you to believe that what you have to look forward to outweighs what you have to fear.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
A little voice in the back of your head is telling you to get tough with someone who has taken one too many liberties in recent weeks. Listen to it.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Any minor health worries you have must be dealt with over the next 48 hours. Most likely you have absolutely nothing to fear but it won't hurt to get a professional opinion.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Many things in your life need to change and tomorrow's eclipse means this is the time to gets serious about them. Identify your highest ideals and accept nothing less than perfection.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
If you take notice of the way certain people are acting it will be obvious what needs to be done to resolve whatever problems there are between you.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You think you know everything about someone but what happens today and tomorrow will make you see there is more to them than meets the eye.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
A loved one will ask for your assistance today. Think twice about giving it. Chances are they could quite easily resolve their own problems but are merely being lazy.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Tomorrow's solar eclipse in your sign will do wonders for your confidence and give you the courage to start something that could and should transform your existence. Be bold.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Don't let people in positions of power intimidate you. You can be your own worst enemy at times, not least because you doubt that you have what it takes to compete and succeed at the highest level. But you do.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Let your imagination roam over the next few days. An idea that pops into your head may seem outrageous but you will realize there is no reason why it cannot be your reality.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
This is the ideal time to remind an employer that you are on a higher level than most of your contemporaries. Don't let them overlook your many talents.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
If you approach a long-standing problem from an unusual angle you will resolve it with ease.
